BRITISH PARLIAMENT. HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, July 22.

COFFEE DRAWBACK, AND PIECE GOODS BILL.
The Bill for allowing a certain drawback on Coffee exports, and the Bill for exempting Piece Goods from Great Britain from the auction duty, were read a third time and passed.

WESTMINSTER HALL, &c.

Sir Peter Burrell brought up the Report from the Committee appointed to examine into the state and condition of the Houses of Parliament, and of the buildings adjoining.

The Report stated the great danger to be apprehended from fire in the public offices, situated in Palace Yard, from the ruinous condition of many of the buildings, where the most valuable records of the kingdom were deposited; that from age and frequent repairs, the House of Lords was in a very dangerous state; and that the House of Commons, from the want of party walls in the contiguous buildings, was exposed to continual danger. The Committee, therefore, suggested the propriety of erecting buildings suitable to the magnificence and dignity of the nation; and that for this purpose, the sum of 2000l. would be necessary to lay out in procuring plans.

The Report was read, and ordered to lie on the table.

INDIA LOAN BILL.

The Bill for enabling the East India Company to add a million to their capital stock, was read a third time and passed.

Before the question was put,

Mr Dundas thought it necessary to correct a mistake in some of the public papers, which stated, that he had, on a former day, mentioned the certainty of the Company's charter being renewed after its expiration in the year 1794. The fact was, he had made no such assertion, and this he had thought it right to explain before the bill passed, lest any Proprietor of India Stock should be misled into the belief that Government had given any pledge to the public with regard to the renewal of the charter.

AMERICAN LOYALISTS.

The order of the day being moved for going into a Committee on the bill for appointing Commissioners to enquire farther into the losses of the American Loyalists.

Mr Dempster said, he hoped it was the intention of Ministers to include in this bill the very peculiar case of certain American Loyalists, who, under the faith of a proclamation issued by Sir William Howe, had shipped a very considerable cargo of provisions from London to New York, which had been afterwards seized in consequence of the passing of the American Intercourse Bill, and for the loss of which they had not yet obtained the smallest redress.

Mr Thwaites said, that the claim did not fall under the description of the act, as the persons, to whom the Hon. Gentleman had alluded, did not suffer in consequence of their loyalty; and it was on that ground, that the Commissioners under the former act had not thought themselves authorized to take their case into consideration.

Mr Brett thought it was probable the cargo was insured.

Mr Dempster believed it was a total loss; if it was not, he certainly would state it to the House, and therefore he wished the commitment of the bill to be postponed.

Mr Roff objected to the delay, as the subject had been on a former occasion very amply discussed.

The bill was then committed, and the report ordered to be received to-morrow.

SCOTCH BURGHS.

That there be laid before the House, an account of all sums levied under the name of cess, tent, or land-tax, in each of the Royal Burghs in Scotland for the last ten years, distinguishing each year, and the sum so levied in each Burgh.

An account of all salaries or sums of money which have been paid to the collectors of the cess, tent, or land-tax, in each of the Royal Burghs in Scotland, for the last ten years, distinguishing each year.

That the Receiver-General of the Land-tax of Scotland, do lay before the House an account of all sums of money received from each of the Royal Burghs of Scotland in name of cess, tent, or land-tax, distinguishing the sums paid by each respectively in each year.

That there be laid before the House, an account of the gross revenue of each of the Royal Burghs of Scotland for the year 1788, specifying the particular articles of such revenue.

That there be laid before the House, an account of all lands and other heritable property of each of the Royal Burghs of Scotland, which have been sold, feued, or alienated by the Magistrates and Common Council of each Burgh since the Union, specifying the prices for which the same were sold, and the rent received for the same the year immediately prior to the alienation.

Mr Dundas said, he did not mean to oppose the last motion; but as a few in Scotland was similar to a long lease in England, he was afraid the account would be a very laborious work.

Mr Sheridan observed, that as the Right Hon. Gentleman had denied that there had been any considerable alienations of the property of the Burghs, the account could not be very difficult.

ARMY SAVINGS.

Mr Sheridan said, that not being in the House yesterday, when the army savings were voted as a part of the supply of the present year, he wished to know how such a considerable sum was stated as being in the hands of the Paymaster of the Forces.

Mr Grenville said, the money was not actually in the hands of the Paymaster, but was paid into the Bank in his name, and that was the reason it was so stated in the account.

FAMINE IN FRANCE.

Mr Wyndham called the attention of the House to a subject, which, though it had lately been before them, and determined upon, he hoped they would have no objection to take again under their consideration. He alluded to the scarcity of grain which still continued in France, occasioning a distress from which they had reasonably expected an alleviation in the generosity of this country. An idea had gone abroad, that the supply wanted was for the use of the troops. This was now found to be very different from the truth. The supply, it appeared, was really needed by the nation at large, and he was sorry to add, that our refusal had occasioned no little disgust. He had always been against referring this subject to a Committee, which he was convinced might have been settled by his Majesty's Ministers, in whom the House would, on this occasion, have reposed every confidence. If, however, Ministers wished not to take upon themselves a measure of this nature, (and he was convinced they would not impute to him any wish to embarrass them by his proposal) he hoped there was no impropriety in again referring it to a Committee. In either case, he doubted not, with every circumstance considered, the request for a supply would be granted; and he was satisfied the dangerous consequences of could never be felt, from allowing to the necessities of a neighboring and great nation the amount of a single day's consumption of this country.

Sir Joseph Mawbey was against a new Committee. Mr Galsworthy defended the propriety of the report of the Committee, of which he had been one.

Sir Watkin Lewis had every desire to alleviate the distresses of our neighboring country, but regretted that the state of this city was such as made it necessary for him to oppose any new Committee. He was convinced we had no supply to spare; and yesterday the Lord Mayor and Aldermen had raised the price of bread a whole alloy, and offered a bounty for the importation of wheat.

Mr Secretary Grenville was convinced the Hon. Gentleman was actuated by no other motive than that of a liberal and humane mind in reviewing this subject. No man felt more than he did for the distresses of France; but it was the duty of Government; and of that House, to watch over the good of this country. With regard to the subject having been referred to a Committee, he certainly thought Ministers could not have done otherwise; nor while Parliament was sitting, could they of themselves have suspended the operation of an Act in order to grant this accommodation, however necessary. In his opinion too the Report of the Committee was perfectly right. The rise in the price of corn had justified it; nor did he know of any alteration in the circumstances of the countries which could warrant our granting the relief, however small.

Mr Dempster wished earnestly that the subject might be reconsidered. He for one was of opinion, that the comparative state of prices in France and England had not been accurately made.

He was persuaded of the necessity of that country, and that the supply requested could not possibly be of any detriment to this. But although we did feel some inconvenience from granting it, we were by no means justifiable in our refusal. It was a favour they asked, and favours cannot be granted, but at a certain expense.

Sir James Johnstone was against renewing the consideration of the subject.

Mr Courtenay said, the conduct of Administration, in taking upon themselves to suspend an existing law without the authority of Parliament, though this might no doubt be fraud in the case, was a proof that they were not anxious in granting the relief so much wanted.

Mr Roff said, the Hon. Gentleman alluded to an infamous transaction for exporting corn by an artificial reduction of the price. To this Ministers had certainly taken upon themselves to put a stop. From the rise which had taken place in the price of bread as mentioned by Sir Watkin Lewis, and from the heavy rainy weather, which it was not unreasonable to think might protract the harvest for some weeks, he could see no reason to renew the consideration of this subject, and was confirmed in thinking the report of the former Committee highly justifiable.

Mr Wyndham said, that as his proposition did not seem to meet the approbation of the House, he would not trouble them with any motion on the subject; and here the conversation ended.

REVOLUTION IN FRANCE.

PARIS, July 20.

The King did not come to Paris on Thursday, as was at first expected, but on Friday; orders were issued, by beat of drum, from the Marquis de la Fayette, nominated on Wednesday evening Commandant-General of the Parisian Militia, for all the enrolled Citizens to appear in Arms to receive his Majesty. Each District accordingly assembled at their respective guard-houses, and filed off to their appointed stations with the utmost regularity; by ten o'clock, the passage was lined from the Barriere of the Hill of Passy, along the Versailles road, the Place Louis XV, the Rue St Honoré, and the Quai to the Hotel de Ville, by the armed Citizens, a distance of three miles; a body of 2000 young Citizens on horseback, went to receive the King at Barriere, whether he was escorted by the armed Militia of Versailles (for Versailles, too, was armed for freedom) and about three o'clock his Majesty was delivered over to the Parisian army, in a plain coat, accompanied only by the Comte d'Elzings, the Prince de Beauveau, the Duc de Villeroi, and the Duc de Villequier, unattended by any other escort.

The multitude was immense; for none but the sick and dying would be absent on such a day.

At each fortified post in the avenues, streets, and on the bridges of the town, he was saluted by the cannon, taken but two days before from his Arsenal, but not a single cry was uttered of—Vive le Roy! the foolish fervour of idolatry is at an end; wherever a shout did interrupt the solemn silence, it was addressed, in passing, to the King's person, with the words distinctly articulated, of—Vive la Nation!—Vive la Liberté!

The King's coach was preceded by one hundred Deputies of the National Assembly, chosen for the purpose, who marched on foot; by the cavalry of the Citizens, and by the French Grenadiers, with their field-pieces, and the soldiers of different corps who had remained steady to the people, all decorated with the National Cockade of red and blue.

At four o'clock, his Majesty arrived at the Hotel de Ville, where he was received by M. Bailly, the new Mayor of Paris, who addressed him in the following speech, presenting him at the same time with the keys of the city, and a National Cockade, which his Majesty put in his hat, and wore on his return—

"SIRE, I present your Majesty with the keys of the good city of Paris—they are the same which were presented to Henry IV. He had re-conquered his People—here, it is the people who have re-conquered their King."

Your Majesty comes to enjoy the peace you have restored to the Capital; you come to enjoy the love of your faithful subjects! It is for their happiness that your Majesty has assembled around you the Representatives of the Nation, and that you are about to concert with them in laying the foundation of Liberty and public prosperity. What a memorable day was that in which your Majesty came to take your seat like a father in the midst of an united family, whence you were re-conducted to your Palace by the whole National Assembly, guarded by the Representatives of the Nation, prefigured by an immense People! You bore in your august features the expressions of sensibility and happiness, whilst around you nothing was heard but acclamations of joy—nothing seen but tears of tenderness and love!

Sire, neither your people, nor your Majesty will ever forget that great day—it is the most glorious day of the monarchy—it is the epocha of an august and eternal alliance between the Monarch and the People! The circumstance is unparalleled—it immortalizes your Majesty! I have seen the glorious day, and, as if every species of happiness was destined for me, the first function of the nation in which the kindness of my fellow-citizens has placed me, is to convey to you the expressions of their respect and love."

M. Moreau de St Mery, President of the Paris Electors, next addressed his Majesty in a speech, where, after observing to the King how little that people who manifested such genuine and universal transports merited the calumny with which wicked persons had dared to asperse them, "Sire, said he, you have only to repeat to yourself this great and touching truth, that the Throne of Kings is never so solid as when founded on the love and fidelity of Subjects; possessed of them, your's never can be shaken."

The King attempted to speak, but his emotion was too strong to permit him to pronounce the discourse he had prepared.

M. Bailly approached his Majesty, and after receiving his orders, said to the Assembly—"That the King was come to dispel any remains of uneasiness which might still subsist respecting his disposition towards the nation, and to enjoy the preference and love of his people; that his Majesty wished to see peace, and tranquillity restored to the capital, every thing return to its accustomed order, and crimes punished according to the laws."

M. Bailly then declared that the King was ready

Count Lally de Tolland rose, and in a noble and affecting strain of eloquence, spoke nearly as follows: "Are you then satisfied, my fellow-citizens? Behold him, behold that King whom your hearts demanded, whom you desired to see amongst you! I behold him—that King who has returned to you your National Assemblies, and who is come to consolidate your Liberties on an unhaken basis!—May he carry back from this ever-memorable scene the peace of his too long troubled heart—a peace he never deserved to lose! Since he has chosen the love of his People for his only guard, prove to him, that he has gained a thousand times more power than he was inclined to facilitate.—Sire, (said he to the King,) you see these generous and affectionate subjects who idolize you; listen to their acclamations (every sentence was interrupted by them) read in their countenances, penetrate into their hearts, you will see nothing but the expressions of fidelity and love; there is not one who would not cheerfully spill the last drop of his blood to serve you.—Perish the traitors still capable, by guilty insinuations, of calumniating the sentiments of a generous and faithful nation, devoted to their attachment to a just and good King, who henceforward, abandoning the idea of owing any thing to force, is determined to owe every thing to his virtues!"

The King, still more and more moved by this affecting and solemn scene, could scarcely pronounce the words, which were repeated aloud to the Assembly—"My people may always count upon my love."

His Majesty then appeared at one of the windows, with the national cockade, and saluted the people, who filled the square before the Town-house, the windows, and covered the roofs of the houses, and now burst forth into heartfelt acclamations of Vive le Roi, which accompanied him out of town, amidst the firing of artillery and musketry.

His Majesty seemed deeply affected with this solemn and touching spectacle which his capital had exhibited. And what abundant matter for reflection!—but three days, and he himself was ready to give orders to let loose upon this generous, this loving people, all the horrors of war!

On his return, his mind seemed somewhat relieved; and the people expressed their joy—but not a frivolous, an inordinate joy. And it is worthy of remark, that not a single post was abandoned from curiosity. On the contrary, the Guards at each were doubled! A sufficient number of cannon kept loaded with grape-shot, and a general mistrust prevailed amid all this effusion of joy and triumph—so fatal is a breach of faith in Sovereigns—so difficult is it to regain lost confidence! If ever monarch had a dreadful but useful lesson, Louis XVI. is the man. On

* On Wednesday, when he came to the National Assembly, and threw himself into their arms for protection.

† Mr Bailly has received the unanimous thanks of the National Assembly, as President, and made Mayor of Paris by the unanimous voice of his fellow-citizens.

‡ Many attempts were made, so late as Thursday, to prevent the King from coming to Paris; but had he not appeared, it was the general determination to proceed to Versailles, with forty pieces of cannon, and force the bridges of Seine and St Cloud, placing all the suspected persons, with their families, in the front of the battle. The Duke of Orleans and M. de la Fayette never left the King till they had prevailed on him to go to Paris.

quitting the boundaries of the capital, he was delivered to the Versailles militia, and re-conducted home.

In the evening, there was a general illumination; but all was tranquillity. The congratulations were the congratulations of calm courage, successful in the best of causes.

On the transparency at the Town-house were the following words:—"Louis XVI. Father of the French, and King of a Free People!"

LONDON.—JULY 24.

Wednesday their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and Duke of York, came from Brighthelmston to Carlton House, where they breakfasted; after which Mr Sheridan had an audience of the Prince of an hour and a half.

Same day their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, and Dukes of York and Clarence, dined with his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, at Cumberland House.

The Duke of Cumberland amends daily. The very amiable Duchesse is his constant attendant. His Royal Highness's disorder has proved much more favourable than the Duke of York's.

This morning his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales set off for Brighthelmston, in order to be present at the Races, which begin there this day.

This morning, Messrs Dundas and Grenville paid a visit to Mr Pitt, at his house in Downing-street, Westminster.

The Revolution in France bids fair to break one link of the Quadruple Alliance, and may eventually annihilate the whole of that result of Austrian politics.

Yesterday morning died, at her house in Queen-street, Mary Fair, the Right Honourable Viscountess Say and Sele, at the age of 94. The young and gay have lost a cheerful companion; for, although at that great age, she actually danced last Michaelmas at the goose-feast, at her seat at Deddeshall, for four hours.

By the French mail which arrived yesterday, we learn, that at Paris every thing is in the utmost state of confusion; and that the people will, by no means, be satisfied without the most absolute and unequivocal concessions of prerogative on the part of the King.

The French journals, and the other periodical papers, are no longer printed, except the Journal de Paris, which is under the guidance of the people; but, on the other hand, four citizens have taken upon them the charge of the Post Office, to prevent any letters, passing backwards or forwards, being opened.

This shows the extreme power they have acquired in the management of public affairs; a power which they will probably still hold. However, the issue of this important Revolution is by no means determined.

Monf. Necker is recalled; but there are doubts, notwithstanding, whether he will take upon him any onerous management, during the present dangerous state of affairs.

When the King paid an unexpected visit to the States General on the 15th, the clergy, nobility, and commons, taking hold of each others hands, formed a semi-circle around his Majesty, and conducted him to the palace, crying out, "Il ne lui faut pas d'autres Gardes du Corps!"

The Duke of Orleans, in his visits to this country, not only imbibed the air, but the spirit and the genius of it.—He carried back with him English arts, English manufactures, English fashions, and English freedom.—He laid the foundation for the present glorious struggle which animates the Third Estate, and has infused a new nature into the Gallic nation.

When the clergy, nobility, and commons of France, formed a circle around the Sovereign, and were conducting him from the States General to the Palace, a woman broke through the ring, and actually insisted on kissing the King! His Majesty, who was not then in an humour to refuse any thing, most graciously granted the request.

The cockade at first assumed by the Burghers of Paris was green, but it having been recollected that the livery of Count d'Artois was turned up with green, the Burghers immediately changed their cockade to blue and scarlet.

Monfieur de Puységur, and Count de Montmorin, have not yet resumed their former offices. It is supposed they wait the return of Monfieur Necker, who was not arrived on the 20th, but was hourly expected. Count de St Priest is appointed Secretary of State for the home department.

The King only confirmed the appointment of Monf. de Bailly, the new Mayor. The people had elected him to the office, on the execution of Monf. de Flelles. His Majesty also confirmed the nomination of the Marquis de la Fayette, as General of the Burghers.

Towards the end of last week, business of most kinds went on in the ordinary course at Paris. The Theatres were opened, and every other place of public diversion.

Monday last was, however, the first day that the business of the Exchange was transacted, and every thing in Paris, when the mail and last letters came away, wore the face of regular order and tranquillity. Appearances, therefore, promise permanency to the Revolution so suddenly and so wonderfully effected in the capital of France.

The only operation of the populace that challenges the admiration of the foreigners now in Paris, is the demolition of the Bastille, which proceeds regularly from day to day, without the smallest molestation on the part of Government.

Letters from Valenciennes and Astras mention, that the Count d'Artois, Baron de Breteuil, the Marquis de Broglie, the Poignac, and others of the Queen of France's party, passed through those places, on the 18th instant, in their way to Spa.

The Journal de Paris received by yesterday's mail, states, that the people had risen in Brittany as soon as they heard of the Revolution at Paris, and marched for that city. They were joined by three regiments that were at the time stationed in Brittany.

The Duc de Luxembourg (a Montmorency) owes his escape to this country to a singular circumstance. He sent for his fader to adjust some matters relating to his equipage, and was surprised at the appearance of an officer. "Are you my fader?" "Yes, my Lord." "Why should you appear in military attire?" "My Lord, I am a Colonel. I am just returned from setting the prisoners free in the Conciert-garde, after having strangled those who were confined for murder; and I am summoned to Versailles to dethrone the King." "Dethrone the King! You are mad!" "Not at all my Lord. It is a matter determined on, if the army remain in the neighbourhood; and as you pay me decently, I warn you, that your name is among the proscribed, and that you had better be gone." The Duke took the advice of the fader, and is now in London, as are the Duke and Duchess de Colbert, fix of their children, and a great multitude of persons of inferior rank.

Letters from the southern parts of France give favourable accounts of the wheat harvest, the general reaping having commenced in Guienne and Languedoc the 29th of June.

Marshall Laudohn has written to the Emperor, to inform him, that he expected there would be a practicable breach in the walls of Berbir by the 27th ult. and that it was his intention to storm the fort, left if he should wait to take it by regular approaches, he should lose too much time, that the enemy might be able to succour it. The place is garrisoned chiefly by Bofniacks. The houses had been almost all beat down by the Marhal's artillery, when the last letters left the camp before Berbir. The forces employed in this siege amount to 26,000 men.

RUSSIANS AND SWEDISHES.
By the Dutch mail arrived on Wednesday, we learn, that a courier arrived at Stockholm on the 2d of July, from the King of Sweden, with letters to the Queen, Hereditary Prince, and Regency; advising, that, on the 28th of June, at seven in the morning, his Majesty met with a body of 3600 Russians, by Uddermalm, two Swedish miles (thirteen English) from Dairstadt; on which the Swedish left wing, under Lieutenant General Platen, began the attack. The action then became general, and very warm on both sides; and though the Swedes had but 2100, they repelled the Russians, and took possession of their camp. The Swedish regiment of Westermanstrand suffered most, having one officer killed and two wounded; but the Swedes lost on the whole 120 killed and wounded. The Russians lost above double the number. The King of Sweden, who acted as a volunteer in the engagement, did not animate the troops a little; in fact, much that after the first fire, they followed the old Swedish method of charging with their bayonet. During this, Major Paulman, with his corps, marched in the rear of the enemy, and behaved so well, that his Majesty made him a Lieutenant Colonel. The King gave orders, after the army had rested eight hours, they should pursue the enemy again. His Majesty is going to Willmanstrand, and the main body are to remain in the Russian camp near Reddemalm, in order to attack the enemy the moment the King returns from seeing his other orders carried into execution.

The King of Sweden has sent the following letter to his son:

"My dear Son, I have received two letters from you, by which I am obliged. I would not answer you before, because I had not seen the enemy. Their troops, however, have fought well, but ours better. This must excite you to prove worthy of commanding such a generous and brave people. I am well, and always your affectionate father, GUSTAVUS."

We have just received an account, that another action has taken place between the Russians and Swedes in Finland, in which the latter were defeated. General Mitchellson, notwithstanding the check he received from Colonel Stedding, who forced him to retreat to Christina, having been reinforced from Willmanstrand, renewed his attack of Fort St. Michael. Colonel Stedding was obliged to fall back, to a place at some distance, where General Siegroth lay with a body of 4000 of the Swedish army. The Russians followed, and a battle ensued. General Siegroth, after a most vigorous defence, was obliged to give way, with the loss of 600 men killed, and about 400 wounded. St. Michael fell into the hands of the Russians.

The loss of this fort will be the more sensibly felt by the Swedes, as it was the depot of all the provisions and stores for their army in the province of Savolax, and which are now in the possession of the Russians.

The Swedes fought with great intrepidity; though driven from post to post, they never fled; and when they were at last obliged to give up the contest, they retreated in very good order. They repulsed the Russians in two different attacks; but they were forced, at the third, to bend under the weight of superior numbers. This action took place on the 16th of last month.

To complete the misfortune of the Swedish army, thirteen transports, laden with provisions and stores for the use of that army, have been lost on the rocks near Norrtopping. One of those vessels had on board the medicine chests destined for the use of all the ships composing the royal fleet at Carlscrona.

The Bank of Berlin, which acts under the King's authority, has lent 800,000 rix-dollars (about 160,000*l.*) to the King of Sweden; and a banking-house in Amsterdam has advanced about 100,000*l.* more, on the security of the Swedish government.

The magazines which have been formed for the continental armies, and the continued exportation of wheat to France, have, since March last, run up the prices of wheat from 10*s.* to 12*s.* 6*d.* per bush at Hamburg, Lubbeck, and other German ports.

His Majesty has been pleased, not only to grant his most gracious pardon to Mr. David Wardrope, late Surgeon of the Phaeton frigate, but also, by an order in Council, to direct, that he may be restored to his former rank on the list of Surgeons in the Royal Navy.

It has transpired, that if the French Ambassador had succeeded in his requisition for the 20,000 sacks of flour, they were to have been appointed for the use of the French troops, and not in alleviation of the people's distresses.

The Russian and Swedish Ambassadors have conferences almost daily with the Minister. The mediation for an accommodation between those powers is still on the tapis.

The price of wheat at Warminster on Saturday fell eight pence from 2*s.* to 1*s.* 7*d.* per sack; and in Salisbury market last Tuesday it advanced from 33*s.* to 34*s.* per sack.

The rise in the price of bread took place this day. Some discoveries have been made, however, by which any further rapid rise of the corn market will, by attention, be prevented: among others, a company are said to have sent to France in bags, marked "Beans" upwards of 140,000 quarters of flour, bought up by French Agents at very advanced premiums.

Corn Market, Wednesday July 22.
The letters of this day, stating an advance on all grain in every part of the kingdom, (particularly in the West), and the heavy rains of last night and this morning, caused our Meal-men to offer 6*s.* 7*d.* for wheat, which is full 2*s.* per quarter advance on Monday's prices; and the extreme distress of the inhabitants of Canada and Bermuda is such, that gentlemen in possession of their orders, have given an advance of 3*s.* per quarter on white peas. Oats, Beans, and other grain, have increased their value considerably; and should this unfavourable weather continue, they must still go higher.

EDINBURGH.

Mrs Lockhart, Lady of Captain Lockhart of the Royal Navy, was safely delivered of a son on the 25th current, at her house, George's Square.

This day, the remains of the late Countess of Lauderdale, who died on the 18th inst. to the inexpressible grief of her family, were removed, in a private manner, from Hatton, and deposited in the burying-place within the parish church of Ratho.

Her Ladyship was married to the Earl of Lauderdale in 1748, and brought him an ample fortune. But she enriched his family more by her virtues than her fortune. Instead of hurrying into the gaiety and dissipation of fashionable life, to which her rank and situation might have allured her, she came to Scotland soon after her marriage, took an early and decided attachment to that country, and to the family of her husband, and devoted herself to the duties of domestic life. She was ambitious of becoming a good wife, and a good mother, and she attained her object. In the former of those characters she acquitted herself with inimitable propriety; and the care and attention which she bestowed on the education of her children are not to be conceived but by those who were witnesses of her conduct. Though much of her time was spent in that private but laudable employment, yet she possessed talents and activity eminently qualified for shining in a more general intercourse with the world; and which would have distinguished her amidst the bustle of a court. When she appeared in society, her affability, and the energy and vivacity of her conversation, diffused a general animation and happiness around her; while the well-known value of her character, and the superiority of her understanding, secured for her the utmost attention and respect. She delighted in the society of her children; and, as she had been married at an early period of life, all of them, and even some of her grand-children, grew up to be her intimate companions and friends; they were able to discern her excellence, and they justly regarded her with the highest degree of affection.

Amidst scenes of deep domestic distress, her sympathy was not exhibited in unavailing lamentations, but was demonstrated by an astonishing presence of mind, which suggested effectual resources and expedients for the relief of the suffering objects. To the poor and the distressed around her residence, she was a kind and unwearied benefactress.

She possessed an acute discernment of characters, and honoured but a few with her particular friendship. But, as that friendship was the result of mature deliberation, it was characterized by that permanency which can alone proceed from a warm sensibility, united with a just and correct understanding.

For some time, her constitution had begun gradually to give way; but her fortitude of mind never forsook her, during a very painful malady, which baffled the aid of medicine, and in which, with firmness and resignation, she perceived her approaching dissolution. She died at the age of 56 years, leaving her afflicted husband, her children, grand-children, and friends, to lament the loss of a life which, to them, had been, and might have, for many years, continued to be, of inestimable value.

Her Ladyship, whose maiden name was Mary Turner Lombe, was the second daughter and co-heiress of Sir Thomas Lombe, who was distinguished as the first in this country who established mills for the spinning of silk, in which he was protected, and repeatedly encouraged by Parliament.

On Friday, the 24th inst. died, at Paisley, Charles Maxwell, Esq. of Merkworth.

On Wednesday died here, Mrs Phillips, mother of Mrs Jordan.

Died at Ardrossan, Perthshire, the 20th inst. James Drummond of Balmacoul.

Saturday, the celebrated Mrs Piozzi, with her husband and daughter, set out from Walker's Hotel, New Town, for Stirling, Glasgow, &c. on a tour through the west of Scotland.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

This day, came on before the High Court of Justiciary, the trial of Peter Matheson and Malcolm McGregor, indicted at the instance of his Majesty's Advocate, for stealing, from a lapidary in town, a number of valuable seal-blocks, and other articles.

Immediately after the indictment was read over to them, and before the panels were called upon to plead to it, the Lord Advocate, in a speech replete with humanity, and which did great honour to his feelings as a man, but more especially in his character of public prosecutor, informed the Court, that, on account of the youth of one of the panels, Matheson, apprentice to the lapidary, and who is only about fifteen years of age, his Lordship, instead of trying him capitally, which the crime of which he was accused well merited, meant to restrict the libel to an arbitrary punishment; because he was convinced in his own mind, and indeed was in the certain knowledge of it, that the boy had been led astray from ill advice, by others of mature age, who still remained behind the curtain. With respect to the other panel, Mr McGregor, his Lordship observed, that though the plea of youth did not equally apply in his case; yet as he was only a 16er, and as he had passed from the picaresque being to a capital one, he felt himself bound to shew the same lenity to the accused, and therefore restricted the libel as to both. This being minutes, the Lord Justice Clerk put the question first to Matheson and then to McGregor, when they both pled Guilty. The Jury were then chosen, and the usual interlocutor pronounced, allowing the panels a proof of all facts and circumstances tending to alleviate their guilt; but no proof being offered on their part, the Jury were ordered to include in the Robing-room, as the Court would fit till they returned with their verdict. As soon as it could be wrote out, the Jury returned, all in one voice finding the panels Guilty. The Court delayed pronouncing judgment till to-morrow at one o'clock afternoon.

EDINBURGH RACES.

To-morrow four horses start for the King's Purse, and fine sport is expected.—We hear the Lord Provost has ordered the horses to start precisely at eleven o'clock.

THEATRICAL INTELLIGENCE.
Friday night, Mr Fennel, before the play, addressed the audience in the following words:

"Ladies and Gentlemen,
"After a long and painful secession from the stage, I have again the pleasure of offering myself a candidate for your favour; emboldened by almost unanimous forgiveness, and assurances of future protection and support from that respectable body of gentlemen whom I had the misfortune particularly, though unintentionally, to offend.

"I will not now to adduce to your recollection, any further than is absolutely necessary, circumstances which could not have been more displeasing to the audience in general than they were peculiarly distressing to myself; but, upon very serious and dispassionate reflection, I cannot but confess, that my conduct, at that unhappy period, was highly imprudent: When, however, it is considered, that it was actuated, as it really was, by the flattering, though deceitful hope, that I should thereby obtain the esteem rather than the censure of the audience, my error may, in some measure, be palliated by the motive that misled me.

"As I am about descending to any low disguise, or evasion of terms, I beg leave, in the most open and unequivocal manner, to apologise for my conduct to the public, or any part of it, whom it may have offended.

"I have now to request, you will kindly restore me to my former situation, by permitting me to undertake this evening the character of Othello.

The report of the Privy Council, respecting the powers of the Elder Tree to repel Blights and Vermin, has been confirmed by extensive experiments in Yorkshire, Devon, Berks, Hertfordshire, and Kent. At Yarmouth they are attempting to depurate animal oil, to make it fit for culinary purposes and the table.

A plan is under consideration from the first engineer in the kingdom, to make the Humber navigable at low water, for the largest ships in the navy.

Curiosity.—On Monday last a woodcock was shot, on a piece of fallow ground, near Axwell Park, and on Tuesday it was eat at Sir Thomas Clavering's table: it was as fat and good as any Woodcock in the common season.

Thursday the Jason, Sanderford arrived at New-castle from Greenland, with 54 leaguers, 30 butts, and 6 puncheons, containing 70 tons of blubber; 3 tons whale fins, 2 unicorn horns, 8 seal skins, and 3 bear skins, being the produce of 7 whales, 4 unicorns, 8 seals, and 3 bears, caught and taken in those seas by the crew of the Jason, belonging to Sunderland, arrived at that port from Greenland, with 4 fish and some seals.

The Grampus, Capt. Noble, arrived at Sunderland the same day, from the Greenland seas, with 5 fish, 116 seals, 1 unicorn, and 4 bears.—The captain brings accounts of the success of the following ships, when he left the country on the first of July, viz.

Sunderland: the Sunderland, 2 fish; Leviathan 2. —Sheld: Jason, — fish, &c. —Whitby: Hope, 2; Volunteer, 4; Henrietta, 2; —Lynn: Bellamy, 7.

Capt. Noble reports, that several ships had received damage, and that the following are lost, viz.

The Ansaldo, of Liverpool, with 14 fish and 1500 seals; Phillipine, of ditto, with 10 fish and 2000 seals; Minerva, of Londonderry, with 3 fish on board, and Endeavour of Hull, — the mate, and eight of the crew of the last-mentioned ship came home in the Grampus.

The Catle, of Hull, left the country sometime before the Grampus came away, much damaged, with her stern nearly out.

Many ships are beset with ice, and it is feared there will be much loss amongst them, and several ships were left clean in the country.

Captain Noble mentions there was a concussion, as of an earthquake, in the country, on the 3rd of May, three flocks of which was generally felt by those on the fishery, in lat. 78.

In the passage home, Captain Noble spoke the Silver Eel, of Whitby, outward-bound for Oniga, 15 leagues distant from the north-east of Shetland, all well.

Wednesday se'ennight the Lively, Capt. Todd, Greenlandman, with 6 large fish, and 625 seals, passed by Whitby for London; also the Beaver, Capt. Ward, with 1 fish, greatly damaged, passed by the above port for the same place.

The Precedent, Benn, arrived at Whitehaven on Monday from Greenland, with 10 fish, and 832 seals.

The Thompson, Bell, also with 3 fish, (2 of them large) and 17 seals.

Capt. Ansdell, of Liverpool, and part of the crews of two vessels, lost in the ice, arrived there in the Precedent.

STEWARTS.
BEING the sole Refiners and Improvers of the Art of FILLAGREE IN PAPER, they are concerned to find it is in danger of being again lost by the pretensions of others to teach it, who execute it without either fancy in the design, taste in the colours, or judgment in arranging them; and made of paper, which, from its inferior quality, cannot possibly stand the test of time, more than the colours it is done with, which are of the lowest price.

They submit to the inspection of the ladies a constant succession of elegant patterns, and a complete assortment of Paper of the brightest colours, with a Cabinet of their work, &c. at their house, No. 123. great value to a purchaser, as there is little wood in the neighbourhood, and lies so near the thriving manufacturing town of Brechin, where fuel is much wanted. This estate is situated on the great road from Perth to Aberdeen; lies in a fine sporting country, abounding with all sorts of game, and within a mile of the river Northesk, remarkable for fine salmon fishing; and the water of Cruik, plentifully stocked to 250 acres, which are already improved, inclosed, and a present in pasture, and upwards of 350 acre-moore, very fit for improvement, and on which any purchaser can begin to improve immediately, will not be sold unless one or other of the two first lots be disposed of.

The proprietor has right to the tithes, which are relued; and the public burdens are very moderate.

The lands in the first lot lie within two measured miles of Eyemouth, and seven of Berwick. The lands in the other lot lie a little more than one mile from Eyemouth, and five from Berwick. And the lands in the third lot about three miles from Eyemouth. The lands in lot first and second are in excellent order, and completely inclosed; and there are such clauses in the leases as oblige the tenant to keep and leave them in a state of improvement. The soil of the whole lands is remarkably good. The houses upon the farms are in perfect good repair, and have been lately built at a very considerable expense.

The first lot stands valued in the Oct. Book at 617 l. 19 s. 4 d. 6-11ths Scots of valued rent, whereof 563 l. 9 s. 9 d. 6-11ths hold of the Crown, and 44 l. 9 s. 5 d. of a subject. Lot II. stands valued at 731 l. 8 s. 9 d. and Lot III. at 100 l. 8 s. 0 d. so that the two last lots together can enable the purchaser to make two votes. The valuation of all the three lots is 1451 l. 17 s. 6 d. 6-11ths Scots, holding of the Crown, and 44 l. 9 s. 7 s. Scots of a subject; and the quantity of lands in the whole is 2000 acres.

The Proprietor, in the view of a sale, has taken the tenants bound by their leases to allow the purchaser to take into his own possession, upon a value to be fixed by arbitrators, as much ground as may be required for a house and policy; and there are large thriving plantations of trees on each of the lots.

The articles of roup, and title-deeds, which are clear, will be seen by applying to Messrs Campbell and Gilman,
No. 22, Princes Street, who will inform as to other particulars, and will receive offers for a private sale.

Mr Robert Thompson, the factor at Aytoun, will show the lands.

To be SOLD by public roup, within the Tontine Tavern, Glasgow, upon Wednesday the 10th of September next at one o'clock afternoon.

divided into thirty inclosures. The present free rent (valuing what is in the proprietor's own possession at a moderate rate, and including 8 l. 13 s. 6 d. Sterling of fee-duties) is about 200 l. Sterling; but, as the leases of the farms of Springhill and Wraes will expire in a few years, a very considerable rise of rent may be expected from them, as well as from the other lands, at the expiration of the leases.

Upon the lands of Arthurie there is a good mansion-house, consisting of a dining room, study, five bed-rooms, a kitchen, cellar, and separate apartments for servants, with number of other conveniences, and a garden well stocked with fruit trees, and inclosed with a high stone wall.

country adjacent. The offices consist of a good stable, byre, barn, brew-house, &c. all lately built, and fitted in a most sufficient manner.
